

THE HERALD
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
ELLIS & NOURSE.
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 28, 1852.

McCARTY of the Paducah Journal, wants to know whether that steamboat that came so near Bardstown, traveled on the turnpike or the dirt road. Mac himself, when here, always took the dirt road; because he preferred to trudge through the mud to paying toll on the pike. We could not imagine at first why he should ignore the existence of the Beach Fork, which we believe he was once warmly in favor of locking and damming, until we recollected that the Beach was a branch of Salt River and since his race for Congress, Mac does not like even to think of that celebrated stream.

Rev. N. L. Rice, D. D., has been preaching here during the past week to large audiences in the church in which he commenced his distinguished career.

The celebrated Austrian Minister, Prince Schwarzenburg, is dead. He was a nephew of the man who commanded the allied army against Napoleon at the battle of Leipzig.

The Whig National Convention, for nominating candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency, is to be held at Baltimore, on the 16th of June. Our present impression is that General Scott will be nominated for the first office, and if so the Democrats may look out for a Waterloo defeat.

There has been an awful flood in the Allegheny, Monongahela, Potomac and other streams rising in the mountains of Pennsylvania and northern Virginia. The destruction of property has been very great, and some lives have been lost.

One of the most dreadful catastrophes we have ever heard of was the late wreck of the British steam frigate Birkenhead, near the coast of South Africa. She struck a sunken rock under full headway and sunk so rapidly that more than six hundred persons on board, not quite two hundred were saved.

It will be seen by reference to our advertising columns that Mr. James Hite has enlarged and improved his Store house, and filled it with a general assortment of fashionable Dry Goods, Hats, Caps, Bonnets, &c., &c., all of which he offers low for cash, or on short time to punctual dealers.

S. S. McDonnell continues to offer inducements to those who deal in Cakes, Candies, &c., at his Confectionary on Main street.

We call attention to Dr. Houghton's Pepsin. See advertisement in another column.

THE NEXT PRESIDENCY.—The Washington correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, writing in relation to the prospects of the respective whig candidates for the Presidency, holds the following language:

"It is considered here that General Scott's chance for a nomination by the whig convention, is growing less very fast. The south will insist on Fillmore or Webster in preference to Gen. Scott, and not a single whig delegation from the south will offer in the convention any assurance that Gen. Scott will obtain any southern support. If Mr. Fillmore should not withdraw his name from the candidature, he will have the nomination of all the southern States, and, ultimately, he or Mr. Webster must be nominated. Many suppose that the choice of the latter would be as good as that of the former, but as to this there are different opinions. As to the whig Vice President, it is now a question whether Mr. Crittenden or Gov. Jones shall be the nominee; but it must, I think, be the former."

The last number of Our Country, an excellent paper published in Boston, says:

"We have an abiding conviction that when the whig national convention assembles, Gen. Scott and Mr. Webster will divide the votes of the northern delegates—Gen. Scott having a majority. The entire southern delegation will be in favor of the present administration; and as Mr. Fillmore is the chief of it, they will first cast their vote for him, as a merited compliment for his firmness in supporting the constitutional rights of all sections of the country. But this done, they will, we think, ultimately cast their votes for Daniel Webster; and the united vote of the south and Mr. Webster's strength at the north, will give him the nomination of the whig convention."

"The fire is going out, Miss Filkins." "I know it, Mr. Green; and if you would act wisely, you would follow its example."

It is unnecessary to add that Green never "axed" to set up with that gal again.

A new Geography, just published, speaking of the chief towns of Kentucky, says "Bardstown is a beautiful village situated on one of the forks of old Salt river. It is noted for the beauty of its ladies and for the beauty of the Dugout reeppes taken by Booth & Biancaguel," who have this Geography for sale; also, a variety of other Books which they offer at Louisville prices.

From the Paducah Journal.

In Good Taste.
One of the most sensible and dignified editorial replications we have read for some time, is the article in the last Lexington Statesman in reply to an attack upon it by the Louisville Times. In response to some personalities, the Statesman says:

We say to them, however, that if they will be industrious, they can probably find enough of actual folly in our past life to gratify all the cravings of their malice, without a resort to falsehood; for like most men we have done some things which we regret, and he has been fortunate who has not. If we were so disposed, we are sufficiently familiar with the personal history of two of the editors of the Times to enable us to paint scenes which they would, perhaps, much rather were left untouched; but such a task is not congenial to our nature and disposition; and while it would profit us nothing, it would show that we are capable of a like weakness with ourselves. We have long since resolved, that as we cannot gratify the vain wish of recalling the past, as most men would like to do, we will endeavor to profit by experience and improve the future, "shoot folly as it flies," and strive so far as we can to

"Govern our passions with absolute sway, And grow wiser and better as life wears away."

We like the Statesman's picture of what a political journal should be.—The editor seems to have a high appreciation of the duties and responsibilities of journalists. We give the closing paragraph of the article, merely changing a word or two, to make the sentiment cover a larger area than at first designed:

It takes something more than flippant paragraphs to constitute a political journal, to say nothing of an "organ." It takes a high appreciation of the sacredness of its cause, of the purity and elevated character of its faith; an exalted estimate of truth; a sublime forbearance under a sense of injustice; a zeal tempered by wisdom and discretion; a due respect for the opinions, feelings, and character of others, whether political friends or opponents; but especially should this rule be observed toward co-laborers in the same cause; a judgment capable of distinguishing between what should be said and what should be left unsaid; a magnanimity that is ready to acknowledge error when satisfied of its commission; a modest estimate of one's own merit, and a quick perception of merit in others, with a willing disposition to commend it. It takes all these and much more besides. In these noble qualities the best of us too often fail.

THE VICE PRESIDENCY.—The following is from the Washington Correspondence of the Philadelphia North American:

Among the most discreet and sagacious Whigs in and out of Congress, it is thought politic and desirable, for very manifest reasons, that the subject of the Vice Presidency should not be mooted until the meeting of the National Convention. By common consent, the nomination for President has been conceded to the Northern States; and, in the same tolerant spirit, the South should be permitted, at the proper time, to indicate its preference for the second office. Prudence in this personal matter may be the means of obviating difficulties of removing false prejudices. When the suggestion is so obviously just in itself, and is recommended by so many incidental considerations, no arguments are needed to impress it more forcibly. Any one of the gentlemen who have been named in this connection, would command the confidence and support of the party, and, at the same time, fill the position with dignity and credit. Under such circumstances, the State Conventions, in the North especially, might properly abstain from expressions of preference, leaving the Convention uncommitted, as it was in 1848. The action of Pennsylvania in this respect is worthy of imitation.

WHIG NATIONAL CONVENTION.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce in a late letter says:

The whig Senators held a conference, this morning, at the Capitol, upon the subject of fixing a time and place for holding the national whig convention. The attendance was general. Mr. Seward was present; also most of the Southern whig Senators. It has been the understanding and wish of the whigs that their friends in Congress should recommend the time and place of the convention. There was at the Senatorial caucus some difference of opinion as to the place, but the majority were in favor of Philadelphia. It was agreed that the time should be distant, so as to afford a better chance for harmonious action, and also to enable the whig convention to take the advantage of any mistakes that might be made by the Baltimore convention in their platform or their nominees. It was further agreed to appoint a committee to confer with a committee to be appointed by the whigs of the House. This joint committee will fix the time and place of the convention, and will issue a notice of the same in due time. The first day of July is likely to be fixed as the time, and Philadelphia as the place of meeting of the whig convention.

Pretty Good.—The Portsmouth Journal tells the following story:

At a meeting of the Democratic friends, on Monday night, one of the candidates for the Common Council, who was once dissipated, but now is reformed, made a speech, in which he commended Democracy in general, and the ticket which his name ornamented in particular. This so elated a well known and eloquent advocate of Democracy that he immediately rose and said that "he was rejoiced to find that there was one man in Portsmouth who could leave off getting drunk without forsaking the Democratic party."

Some wag asks the editor of the Boston Carpet Bag, whether, under the "Maine Law," a man is allowed to wear his arm in a sling, to make merry over the London Punch, to sell soap in bars, to communicate with the rapping spirits, to administer a "drop of comfort" to a suffering friend, to punch his neighbor's head, to purchase corned beef, to tap his enemies' claret, to eat rum cherries, or to beat the spirit-stirring drum.

Candidates.
We are authorized to announce Silvester Johnson a candidate for the Sheriff of Nelson county, at the next August election.

BELL'S CIRCASSIAN VEGETABLE FLUID,
For the Growth, Preservation, Beautifying and Restoration of the HUMAN HAIR.
Prepared and Sold by GRAHAM BELL & CO., Louisville, Ky.

THIS Fluid, if used properly, will restore the hair when baldness has taken place—prevent it from falling off when baldness is apprehended—remove Dandruff, Scurf, &c., from the Scalp, and from its soft and penetrating qualities, give to the hair a most beautiful, lively and brilliant appearance.

Though but recently offered to the Public, it has already received the unqualified approbation of hundreds; and testimonials in its favor, unsolicited, have been received from a large number of gentlemen and ladies of this State.

The Ladies, too: (God bless them,) have never failed to approve of the Fluid after a trial; and when it once finds its way to a ladies toilet, it soon becomes as indispensable as soap or water.

Mothers wishing to see their children's heads covered with luxuriant hair, and who have used Bell's Fluid, speak of it as the very best article of the kind ever used by them.

One application will be sufficient to remove Dandruff. Gentlemen who wish to improve their whiskers, will find this a most valuable assistant, giving them a thick, glossy, fine and curling appearance. For this purpose it is all that can be desired.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, often find that their hair is apt to become very dirty, and full of Dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, &c. The use of the Fluid as directed, will give the most surprising sweetness, purity and cleanliness to the hair and scalp, indeed, all that the most refined taste or delicacy could require.

CAUTION.
Avoid the use of soaps or fixed alkalis to cleanse the scalp or hair, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair very harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break off, and will often more or less change its color.

Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum, &c., or all preparations and perfumes which contain alcohol have the same pernicious effect upon the hair.

AN ORDINANCE.
At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Bardstown, held on the 27th day of April, 1852, the following order and ordinance were passed, to wit: Lucius Melvin and Jas. B. Slack are appointed a day and night watch, to aid and assist the Marshal to arrest and bring all offenders against the laws of the State and laws and ordinances of Bardstown, to trial, for all offences committed within the limits of Bardstown, for which services the Board agrees to pay to each at the rate of one hundred and fifty dollars per annum, but subject to be removed at the pleasure of the Board of Trustees; and that said watch severally take an oath before a Justice of the Peace or Police Judge, to discharge the duties of said office faithfully and impartially, and they, the said watch, are severally authorized and directed to take all offenders before the Police Judge or some Justice of the Peace, to be dealt with according to law when arrested in the day time, and if arrested after night to commit such offenders to jail for the night and to bring said offenders out of said jail the next day, as soon as an officer can be had to try such offenders.

It is ordered that in all cases where any person or persons shall be fined by the Police Judges, Justices of the Peace, or by verdict of a jury, and judgment upon said verdict under the ordinance of Bardstown, such convicted offenders, unless he or they pay the fine and costs, shall be imprisoned as well for the costs as the fine. And, if the fine be paid and the costs not paid, such offenders shall be committed to jail until said costs be paid. In all cases where any person shall be convicted the second time, for the violation of the laws and ordinances of said town, it shall be the duty of the Police Judge to require such offender to give security for his good behavior.

Observation of facts and rigorous induction.
Observation des faits, et induction rigoureuse.
Démonstration Historique de la Philosophie au siècle XIX.

67. Let us proceed a little farther in the analysis of any free act of our will. Every free and moral act moves from the desire of happiness, which is an indeliberate and necessary act of the will; just as every demonstrated evidence or truth derives from some self-evident principle, which cannot be demonstrated. Hence whenever we wish for any object particular and limited, we freely wish for it as a particular good. But before we freely determine ourselves to wish actually for it, we are supposed beforehand to have known it as good, and consequently to have been pleased with it. But to be pleased with an object is not precisely to wish for it; for before wishing actually for an object good, we must know it as attainable; and if we know the possibility of attaining it, then we may determine to wish for it; which determination is called by Philosophers intention (finis intentionis).

68. But to attain an end we must use means; hence as soon as the will freely determines to attain any particular good, she commands the understanding to investigate, examine, and choose the most proper and fit means to the attainment of that particular good and end, that she freely wishes for. And if the use of the means requires the exertion of any of our senses or other external faculty, an impulse is given to them by the same will so as to set them to work as much as she wants.

69. What series of actions. What was the first cause that gave the first impulse to it? Was it in the wish for that particular good or object? Suppose for instance, that I went through the above series of actions in order to help a distressed family. Was the relief of this family, that gave me the first impulse? But how so, if I had to know first, that it would be a good for me to relieve that family, and I had to be pleased with such a relief as a particular good, before I freely determined to do my best to attain and execute it? But what was it, that made me be pleased with the idea of relieving that distressed family? It was but the natural and necessary impulse of my will towards her own proper and adequate end, the good without limits. For our will necessarily determined to good in general, cannot but be pleased with any particular good, which after reflection and deliberation she may freely wish for, and go through all other operations in order to attain it. Hence we may say in conclusion, that every free act may be resolved into two principles, viz: into the natural and necessary tendency of our will towards good in general, and in the perception and representation of a particular good.

70. From what we have said, it is manifest that liberty is with respect to the understanding; that is as the understanding necessarily adheres to the truth when it is evident, and if at the first sight it does not meet with such evidence in some object, it employs reason in order to cast on the same object, if possible, some ray of that light, which it intuitively and immediately contemplates in the first principles or truths, so the will, when good in general, or good without limits, is represented by the understanding, necessarily tends towards it, and if it does not find in any particular object the whole reason of good, it imparts to it, as it were, some participation of that good in general by freely wishing for it as a means to attain that same infinite good or good without limits. Moreover as we said above (No. IX, 56, X, 57), many acts of the understanding and other faculties of man are connected with every free and deliberate act of the human will, depending altogether from the same will, from which they receive their moral character in as much as they are directed by it according to the designs of the Creator. Hence we may define morality of actions to be the direction given freely by the will to her own acts or to those of other faculties; which direction will be good or bad according to its agreement to, or disagreement from, the designs of the Creator (No. IV, 16). Three then are the principles necessary for such direction, viz: knowledge of end and means, will as to the first, physical liberty as to the second; principles of the morality of actions in as much as they refer to the agent, and consequently they are the principles of the moral good and perfection of man. Knowledge, I said, offend and means, is the first of the three above mentioned principles of man's moral good and perfection. Let us then proceed to see, how does man acquire this knowledge necessary to direct well his actions.

71. That man must know what he wishes for, and that knowledge precedes volition, is a fact testified both by internal experience, and the consent of all men and Philosophers, for Ignoti nulla cupido. Moreover that man by knowing judges within himself, that such a act is good, and such other bad, and consequently that such acts constitute accordingly the performer of them, either morally good, or morally bad, is likewise a fact testified as true and certain by the same criterions of truth, and by words, found in every Dictionary, such as virtue, justice, temperance, vice, impiety, &c., &c.

72. But here a difficulty occurs about such judgements on the morality of actions; for we see, that even persons of no literary or scientific education are frequently very apt to make good judgements about moral matters; which oftentimes are but very remote illations from first principles of morality, and for the investigation of which Philosophers are obliged to go through very long and complicated reasoning. Such judgment, which is called Moral Sense, some Philosophers think to be the act of a proper faculty, which they call Moral, distinct from reason, or the faculty of reasoning; to this moral faculty some Materialists add a material organ, which they called moral sense. But organ of moral sense is a contradiction; for morality implies abstract ideas; these abstract ideas are the metaphysical proof of the spirituality or immateriality of the human soul; spirituality consists in acting independently on matter; consequently there is as much opposition between the terms moral-organ as there is between the expressions thinking-matter.

73. Helvetius renewing the errors of Epicurus, Hobbes, Spinoza, and like others, teaches, that physical sensibility and personal interest are the Moral sense of man: Je decouvre facilement la source des vertus humaines; je vois, que sans la sensibilité à la douleur et au plaisir physique les hommes sans desirs, sans passions, également indifférents à tout, n'eussent point connu d'intérêt personnel: que sans intérêt personnel ils ne se fussent point rassemblés en société, n'eussent point fait entre eux des conventions, qu'il n'y eût point eu d'intérêt général; par conséquent point d'actions justes ou injustes; et qu'ainsi, la sensibilité physique et l'intérêt personnel ont été les auteurs de toute justice (1). He adds, that this truth is founded on this axiom of Jurisprudence, viz: Interest is the measure of the actions of man, or, as the Epicurean Lyric Poet Horace wrote: Aque ipsa utilitas justis prope mater et aequa.

74. Stewart (2) as well as Cousin (3) confute this system of morality, and of moral sense more proper to brutes than to men by remarking, 1st.—That the ideas of honesty and duty are far different from those of interest and useful. 2nd.—That in this system we cannot give any reason or cause of the approval and admiration, we give and feel, when listening to noble exploits of heroes of past ages, or of fiction. 3rd.—That virtue oftentimes is to be practised with loss of property, of conveniences, and by risking health and even life. 4th.—That children show moral sense and judgments, when altogether unable to know, whether the objects of their moral judgments are useful or not, &c. 5th.—That the more disinterested is the practice of honesty and duty, the more praiseworthy it is judged by the opinion of men, and the more satisfactory it becomes to the individual, who fulfils it. We may add to these remarks, that this system regards man simply as animal without any consideration of his specific and essential attribute reason or intelligence; consequently that it is imperfect and inadequate as to the whole man, a rational animal.

75. Leaving aside these false, material, and brutish systems, let us investigate the efficient as well as the logical principle or cause of the Moral Sense in man. As to the efficient cause Gardil in his learned Essay on this subject proves that it cannot be but the understanding; for, he says, the morality of an action is by its direction to the last end; this direction is a relation; every relation is a truth; consequently to know the morality of an action is to know a truth. But the efficient cause of the knowledge of truth is the understanding; consequently the understanding also is the efficient cause of the Moral Sense, which is but the knowledge of moral truth. The faculty, with which we see people, even ignorant and without any literary education, judge of moral objects and truths, does not show, that the efficient and physical cause of such moral sense is any faculty distinct from our understanding, but rather it is an argument to prove that such a moral knowledge being very necessary to man as a rational being, in consequence of this necessity the all Wise Providence of his Creator gave to his understanding an impulse, as it were, spontaneous and urgent towards the knowledge of moral truths.

Yours,
AN ECCLESIASTIC PHILOSOPHER.

"YOUNG AMERICA."—A Washington correspondent of the New York Herald gives the following as a few of the plans of "Young America," to be carried out as soon as Mr. Douglass is elected President:

The first great measure of this administration of "Young America" will be to send Gov. Quitman or John O'Sullivan, or both, to Spain, to demand satisfaction for injury and insult to the patriots who attempted to free the Cubans against their will; and if satisfaction is not rendered promptly and fully, why the Chagres line of steamers is to be taken at a fair price, an expedition is to be fitted out, and Cuba is to be taken, a force under the command of Gov. Quitman is to hold it, and Mr. Hale, of New Hampshire, for his kind feelings to the blacks, would be the Governor; and Mr. Law's agent, Mr. Croswell, would take back the steamers at a fair price. These and other matters were all arranged between Mr. Douglass, Mr. Law and Mr. Saunders, at Mr. Law's house in New York, one Sunday last fall, while Mr. Croswell was at church.—At the same time an agent (secret, of course,) would be sent to Mexico with a proposal to purchase a strip from the Rio Grand to Mazatlan; but if they will not sell, then adventurers from Texas and other Southern States will go over, join the revolutionists and annex it. This being south of 36 degrees, 30 minutes, would make slave States, and keep up the equilibrium in the Senate; it being understood and agreed by the high contracting parties, that the equilibrium of the Senate shall be restored, never again to be broken.

Governor Seward is to be sent to England, to demand the release of the Irish patriots. If England refuses to give them up, the export of cotton is to be stopped. The South will not complain of this, because the slave power will have been restored. Besides stopping the export of cotton, the Pacific steamers are all to be taken at a fair price and form an expedition to take all Australia, and release the patriots. This expedition (the navel part) would be under Commodore Kearney, and the troops under General Shields. If England makes any fuss about this, Ireland is to be revolutionized, annexed, and Governor Seward could be its Governor. Immediately following all this, possession is to be taken of the Sandwich Islands, the Marquesas, New Guinea, and Borneo. All these immense islands—Australia, gold and all—would be made into slave States and as Mr. Saunders has given up his Ebony line of steamers, Africa could be annexed and supply all with slaves. And who can estimate the blessings to them of such a change of position. In the progress of these great events, Mexico and all South America would become annexed, and formed into slave States. Besides, in the meantime, Com. Perry will, without doubt, have taken Japan, but not in time to make any thunder for Mr. Fillmore. Now, if the nations of Europe make any fuss about all this, why, we shall fight them all, conquer and annex them, and then nine times nine cheers for "Young America."

CONTINUE to publish the following British Periodicals, viz:
THE LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW [Con-

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW [Whig].
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW [Free Chh].
THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW [Liberal].
AND BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE
[Tory].
These Periodicals have been in successful operation in this country for TWENTY YEARS, and their circulation is constantly on the increase notwithstanding the competition they encounter from American periodicals of a similar class and from numerous Emigrant Magazines made up of selections from foreign periodicals. This fact shows clearly the high estimation in which they are held by the intellectual reading public, and affords a guarantee that they are established on a firm basis and will be continued without interruption.
Although these works are distinguished by the shades above indicated, yet but a small portion of their contents is devoted to political subjects. It is their literary character which gives them their chief value, and in that they stand confessedly far above all other journals of their class. Blackwood, still under the masterly guidance of Christopher North, maintains its ancient celebrity, and is, at this time, unusually attractive, from the serial works of Balwer and other literary notables, written for that magazine, and first appearing in its columns. Such works as "The Cenci" and
"My New Novel" (both by Balwer), "My Peninsular Medal," "The Green Hand," and other serials, of which numerous rival editions are issued by the leading publishers in this country, have to be resorted to by those publishers from the pages of Blackwood, after it has been issued by Messrs. Scott & Co., so that Subscribers to the Reprint of that Magazine
may always rely on having the earliest reading of these fascinating tales.

DR. HOOGLAND'S CELEBRATED GERMAN BITTERS
PREPARED BY DR. C. M. JACKSON,
At the German Medicine Store, 120 Arch
St., Philadelphia.

Their power over the above diseases is not exceeded—if equalled—by any other preparation in the United States, as the cures attest.
In many cases after skillful physicians had failed.

These Bitters are worthy the attention of invalids. Possessing great virtues in the re-medication of diseases of the Liver and lesser glands, exercising the most searching powers in weakness and affections of the digestive organs, they are without safe, certain and pleasant. Read and be convinced.
From the Boston Bee.

The Editor said, Dec. 22:
Dr. Hoogland's celebrated German Bitters
for the cure of Liver Complaint Jaundice Dyspepsia, Chronic or Nervous Debility, is deservedly one of the most popular Medicines of the day. These Bitters have been used by thousands, and a friend of our fellow says he has himself received effectual and permanent cure of Liver Complaint from the use of these Bitters. The patient constantly gains strength and vigor—a fact worthy of great consideration.
They are pleasant in taste and smell, and can be used by persons of the most delicate stomachs with safety, under any circumstances.
We are speaking from experience, and to the afflicted we advise their use.

"Scott's weekly" one of the best Literary papers published, mid, August 35—
"Dr. Hoogland's German Bitters, manufactured by Dr. Jackson, are now recommended by some of the most prominent members of the faculty as an efficient remedy in cases of female weakness. As such is the case, we would advise all mothers to obtain a bottle, and thus save themselves much sickness. Persons of debilitated constitutions will find these Bitters advantageous to their health; as we know from experience the salutary effect they have upon weakly systems."

MORE EVIDENCE.
The Philadelphia Saturday Gazette, the best family newspaper published in the United States. The editor says of Dr. Hoogland's German Bitters:
"It is seldom that we recommend what are termed Patent Medicines, to the confidence and patronage of our readers, and therefore when we recommend Dr. Hoogland's German Bitters we wish it to be distinctly understood that we are not speaking of the nostrums of the day, that are noised about for a brief period
and then are forgotten after they have done their guilty race of mischief, but of a medicine long established, universally prized, and which has met the hearty approval of the faculty itself."

Evidence upon evidence has been received (like the foregoing) from all sections of the Union, the last three years, and the strongest testimony in its favor, is that there is no more it used in the practice of the regular Physicians of Philadelphia, than all other nostrums combined, a fact that can easily be established, and fully proving that a scientific preparation will meet with the highest approval when presented even in this form.

That this medicine will cure Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, no one can doubt after using it as directed. It sets specifically upon the stomach and liver; it is preferable to calomel
in all bilious diseases—the effect is immediate.
They can be administered to female or infant with safety and reliable benefit at any time.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.
This medicine has attained that high character which is necessary for all medicines to attain in inducing counterfeits. It is a great mistake to suppose that the name of the medicine articles the risk of the lives of those who are innocently deceived.

Look well to the marks of the genuine. They have the written signature of C. M. Jackson upon the wrapper, and his name blown in the bottle, without which they are spurious.

Life Insurance Company

MORRIS FRANKLIN,

THIS COMPANY is one of the most respectable and responsible in the United States. The business is conducted on a mutual system purely, dividends being made annually on the Policy of each life, and according to the accumulated capital, on which such interest is paid as the Board of Trustees may declare. Individual risks are taken for an amount not exceeding $10,000. The Company has been in successful operation for many years;
during which time it has issued more than 7000 Policies; and, after paying large sums to widows, orphans, and creditors, has now an accumulated fund of $360,000.

The beneficial results of Life Insurance must
